Tips to Overcome Personal Struggles and Achieve Goals

BY STATEPOINT

When faced with tough challenges, it can be tempting to throw in the towel. But experts say the power of goal-setting is fierce and the discipline behind it can help anyone overcome obstacles.

“Failure has the power to break you or it has the power to push you forward,” says Scout Bassett, a U.S. Paralympian in track and field. “Use your experiences as an opportunity to re-evaluate your goals and move forward from there.”

Having lost a leg early in her life in China, Bassett spent her early childhood in an orphanage before being adopted by an American family. She came to the United States at the age of seven just wanting to fit in. As a child she discovered a love of running and set off on a path to qualify for the Paralympic Games. In her first attempt in 2012, she came in dead last and did not qualify for the team. She briefly considered giving up her dream.

This year, she is relishing the progress she has made. As a member of Team USA who competed in Rio, she’s showing off her skills on a global stage and participating in Citi’s “#StandForProgress” program to inspire all Americans to think about the progress they want to achieve in their lives.

Bassett offers the following insights into goal-setting.

- “Progress” doesn’t always come in the form of a medal or an award. Sometimes progress means you have to take a few steps back, go back to the drawing board, see what worked and what didn’t, and

Why Remember?

BY MICHAEL ARMIJO

I once read a story about a 9-year old boy named Travis, whose mother died at home one day. Without telling a soul, little Travis covered her body with a coat and he placed sheets of notebook paper over her face. He learned to fix his own meals – mostly frozen pizza, cereal, and soup – cut his own hair, and attended school without fail. He did this for over a month because he was afraid he’d be placed into foster care if anyone found out his mother passed away. The mother’s body was eventually discovered by family friends. Travis begged them not to call the police.

When I read this story I was moved to write about it from my perspective. A friend asked me why I sought out areas in life that are so traumatic, so emotional, and so powerful. He asked me why I seemed to focus on elements of life that are painful, emotional and disturbing. He asked me “why remember?”

It amazes me what life brings you. It’s like an old, enormous tree that sits in your neighborhood. One day it catches your eye and you tell yourself, “I’ve never noticed that huge obstacle in front of me before.”

Although that tree has been there and developed throughout your life, you never realized that you’ve had to go around it every day. You’re so busy trying to survive that the small detour has become a part of your daily routine.

I kind of feel that my emotions are like that tree. I’ve driven past them for so many years without really paying attention. I kept wondering why it took so long to get anywhere productive; why life was such a hassle for me. And then one day, for a reason only God may know, I noticed this tremendous obstruction in my life that I was going around and avoiding over and over again. I finally became fed up and decided I wasn’t going to go around it anymore – I was going to drive right through that humongous tree.

It was never my plan to have to go and examine the landscaping of my life. I thought I was supposed to follow the path that was laid out before me. But somewhere along the way, I developed a source of confidence that somehow convinced me that the path laid out before me was vulnerable to manipulation. I realized that I could change where I was going and how I was getting there.

I believe there are experiences in life that give you freedom and confidence, but sometimes you end up in a stagnant period where you have to take a moment to sit back and reflect. And during this reflection, you sometimes feel resentful of the circumstances that are before you. You realize that someone in your life planted seeds that grew into this enormous tree that distanced you from the success you feel you deserve. Somehow along the way,

History 101

Capone goes to prison

BY HISTORY.COM

On this day in 1931, gangster Al Capone is sentenced to 11 years in prison for tax evasion and fined $80,000, signaling the downfall of one of the most notorious criminals of the 1920s and 1930s.

Alphonse Gabriel Capone was born in Brooklyn, New York, in 1899 to Italian immigrants. He was expelled from school at 14, joined a gang and earned his nickname “Scarface” after being sliced across the cheek during a fight. By 1920, Capone had moved to Chicago, where he was soon helping to run crime boss Johnny Torrio’s illegal enterprises, which included alcohol-smuggling, gambling and prostitution. Torrio retired in 1925 after an attempt on his life and Capone, known for his cunning and brutality, was put in charge of the organization.

Prohibition, which outlawed the brewing and distribution of alcohol and lasted from 1920 to 1933, proved extremely lucrative for bootleggers and gangsters like Capone, who raked in millions from his underworld activities. Capone was at the top of the F.B.I.’s “Most Wanted” list by 1930, but he avoided long stints in jail until 1931 by bribing city officials, intimidating witnesses and maintaining various hideouts. He became Chicago’s crime kingpin by wiping out his competitors through a series of gangland battles and slayings, including the infamous St. Valentine’s Day Massacre in 1929, when Capone’s men gunned down seven rivals. This event helped raise Capone’s notoriety to a national level.

Among Capone’s enemies was federal agent Elliot Ness, who led a team of officers known as “The Untouchables” because they couldn’t be corrupted. Ness and his men routinely broke up Capone’s bootlegging businesses, but it was tax-evasion charges that finally stuck and landed Capone in prison in 1931. Capone began serving his time at the U.S. Penitentiary in Atlanta, but amid accusations that he was manipulating the system and receiving cushy treatment, he was transferred to the maximum-security lockup at Alcatraz Island, in California’s San Francisco Bay. He got out early in 1939 for good behavior, after spending his final year in prison in a hospital, suffering from syphilis.

Plagued by health problems for the rest of his life, Capone died in 1947 at age 48 at his home in Palm Island, Florida. ■ find a way forward from there. Most of us experience setbacks, disappointments and even failures sometimes, but ultimately those moments can be the greatest motivators.

- The biggest struggles you face may not be the ones handed to you by fate or outside forces. They may be the battles you fight within. Look past your own inner voice discouraging you from your hopes and dreams. Developing mental fortitude is a continuous process.
- You can't change the past but you can help write the future. Embrace and focus on what you have gained, not what you have lost.
- Don't let naysayers hinder your progress or cause you to lose faith in yourself. The beauty of being underestimated is you have an opportunity to defy the odds. Use pessimism to motivate you.

- No one can do it alone, so don't be afraid to rely on the help of others. Even at times when you don't believe in yourself, there may be others who do.

Citi's Stand for Progress program explores how all of us define progress, set goals, overcome obstacles and support and inspire others to do the same. Americans can share how they stand for progress by using #StandForProgress and posting their own goals on Twitter, Facebook or Instagram. Whether it's eating healthier, saving money for a house, or spending more time with loved ones, it helps to clarify your goals by writing them down. ■

Why remember?

you've subconsciously watered those seeds and allowed them to grow into this enormous tree.

When you realize this, you get angry and resentful of your own carelessness and then you remember the selfish acts of irresponsible adults. You can't change what has happened in your life, you can't change these obstacles, those that have prevented you from going on with your life. It's puzzling why we remember those horrid demons that have scarred our lives with darkness and pain. But, I have to ask myself: Why do I remember?

After asking myself that question I realized I had no answer. I then felt compelled to just let the darkness go and try to remember how great life really is. And although that huge and longstanding tree has strong roots that grow deep below the surface, the momentum I carry can uproot these life altering emotions and I can grow and love like many others.

And just like Travis, who used a few pieces of notebook paper to cover a painful sight, hoping that no one would discover it, we can ignore those chapters of our lives. This is why we must ask ourselves: "Why Remember?" ■

Artist Corner

Jaime Morales
a.k.a. Lazy

BY RACINE GUAJARDO

Jaime Morales a.k.a. Lazy has been professionally tattooing for about 16 years. He originally started in prison where he learned with a homemade tattoo machine. He started off wanting to get tattooed, which moved into him trying to practice on himself then as well as his cell mate while he was incarcerated in Chino Youth Training School. As a three striker, Morales prayed that god would give him the ability to start a career as a tattoo artist saying, "I knew deep down in my heart that the ability was there, I just had to do my part in putting in the work. I realized that there's no substitute for hard work." Morales has now been attending Victory Outreach for the past 13 years.

Tattooing for some is beyond just the art, Morales says, "I haven't always been an artist but I always had a desire to tattoo. By being in the business and having to manage myself at times has taught a lot of other things besides just tattooing. It has also taught me how to be a good listener, how to be patient, how to communicate with others outside of my own race. There are so many different styles in tattooing, but Morales says, "I love to do black and grey art and portraits, especially since they are the most challenging to do." When asked what makes him different from other tattoo artists, he states, "I am able to design you something from scratch and also my writing has won me multiple awards. It's rare that you find an artist who can create from scratch and write well."

Jaime Morales is now working at a shop in West Covina called Living Dreams Tattoo Shop. You can contact him on multiple social media accounts; Facebook: Jaime morales, e-mail: lazyr13@yahoo.com, Instagram: Mister_Untouchable and Snapchat: untouchable_laz. ■

Elderly couple found dead in Walnut

near N. Avenida Alipaz and N. La Tortola Drive in Walnut.

Authorities initially said an hourslong standoff ensued after reports of a domestic dispute at the home, and that a barricaded man was possibly armed with an AK-47. Officials later stated the shootings were believed to have occurred before deputies and a SWAT team arrived at the scene, according to ABC7.

Also according to Diamond Bar/Walnut Patch, "Coroner's Assistant Chief Ed Winter identified the man as husband and wife. Investigators believe the husband shot his wife and then shot himself, Winter said."

"I'm shocked," said Valerie Guitron, who has lived in the neighborhood for 13 years. "I mean, that just doesn't happen here." "She said she did not know the man and woman but was heartbroken for their relatives. "I've never seen this," she added. "Our neighborhood is very, very quiet, so when I saw this

I knew that something serious must have happened. It's just sad with everything that's going on in the world," according to an interview conducted by ABC7.

The Walnut Sheriff's Department watch commander announced over its Twitter account that law enforcement activity was near Lemon Creek Park. However, there was no danger to the public and to avoid the area.

The couple was both pronounced dead at the scene. Further investigation is being done at this time. ■

Tips:

What is the difference between organic and conventional produce?

A question from Danny of Arrowhead

BY CLARK'S NUTRITION

Organic produce is regulated by the United States Department of Agriculture (USDA) under the 2002 National Organics Program (NOP). This program defines the term 'organic' and provides the certification, labeling and growing standards for organic foods. Organic foods are produced without using conventional pesticides and fertilizers. These standards also state that organic foods shall not be processed using synthetic ingredients, sewage, sludge, bioengineering, or ionizing radiation. Before labeling with the USDA organic seal a government-approved certifier inspects the farm where the food is grown to make sure the farmer is following all the rules and guidelines set by the USDA-Organics Program. When this is completed the use of the USDA ORGANIC seal is allowed for use on packaging.

A big concern for non-organic foods is the use of pesticides. The connection for pesticides and the long term health concerns for diseases like cancer have brought much attention to the use and overuse of pesticides. The USDA Pesticide Data Program (PDP) and Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) test foods for pesticide residues. The EPA suggests that 99% of all foods tested meet's their criteria for safety. Foods are also tested on a random basis as well.

GMO foods are foods that have been genetically modified. Simply put this means an apple's genes or DNA have been manipulated with another plant or animal DNA, by piecing together strands to make a product with certain outcomes. A great illustration of this is found in Monsanto's (now owned by Bayer Aspirin Co.) golden rice which has been manipulated to include vitamin A content, this being an advantage for vegetarian individuals. The biggest argument for GMO's is less pesticide use and greater yield of foods for a growing world population. This argument has been greatly subdued since the New York Academy of Sciences (2016) reported that GMO foods offer no greater yield. Additionally lower pesticide use was prevalent in the beginning but now is comparable to before GMO use according to the New York Academy of Sciences. GMO grown foods, seeds, or farming practices are not allowed in the NOP.

ganic Program)

Finally how will you know if you are getting organic, conventional, or GMO fruits and vegetables when shopping? For fruits and vegetables there is a standard coding system in the grocery industry. This standard is based on what is called a Program Look Up (PLU) code (which has been in place since 1990). Although this is a voluntary program, almost all grocery and produce companies use this system. This is denoted on the little sticker that is on individual pieces of fruits or vegetables. Of note, there are a few cool things about this system: These codes can be 4 or 5 digits. Four digits are for conventional and often start with the number 4. Organic codes are 5 digits and start with the number 9, while GMO foods have an 8 prefix number and a 5 digit system as well. There is also one other system that is in place to help in identifying where your produce came from. This system is called Country of Origin Labeling (COOL) which was enacted in the United States around 2004. You will notice that there are stickers or signs on either your produce itself, (this also includes meat, poultry, fish and some nuts etc.) or the price sticker on the grocery shelf. A product that comes from outside of the United States can be organically grown but obviously the USDA NOP would not be able to completely certify farms outside of United States. So when shopping for your fruits and vegetables, please keep in mind all of these factors when making your decisions.

Straight Talk With Danice

I just found out that my wife hates camping!—A letter from S.P.

By DANICE AKIYOSHI N.D.

Q: I knew it wasn't her favorite thing to do, but the kids and I love it so I bought a toy hauler that can sleep 6 people. It has a full kitchen with a sink, range and microwave so she would be more comfortable than she was in a tent with regular camping and cooking gear. I bought it to surprise her so we could go camping more often. This is a good way for the kids to see different places without paying high prices for a hotel. I thought she'd be happy and surprised, but she was mad and hasn't been very nice to me in many days. I'm at a loss. Since when do women hate surprise gifts?

A: Sorry, but you'll have to sell your story to someone who hasn't been working with married couples for over 20 years. Let's take inventory here. First of all, I doubt you bought this toy hauler with a full kitchen and lodging to please your wife. It sounds more like it's something you really wanted. The "surprise gift for your wife" idea is just the story you tell yourself so you don't have to feel guilty or selfish for buying something to mainly just please yourself. Sounds like you've got her signed up to be pretty busy doing chores like cooking on these fabulous getaways that you have in mind. Pitching it as a surprise for her probably feels insulting to her intelligence and caused her to react negatively toward you. Not all people feel camping is a fun experience or a relaxing way to spend their time off from work. My question to you is this... If you were considering such a large purchase that was supposedly for the happiness and enjoyment for the whole family, why in the world would you not discuss this with your wife beforehand? Sounds like a passive aggressive, inconsiderate move in my book. I'll bet she's feeling insignificant and has no interest in being your favorite gal pal at the moment. An honest sincere apology is in order. You did not treat her as your partner in this decision. This is a mistake. Here's a helpful hint... When you want to surprise a woman with a gift, give her something that you know for an absolute fact that she will love. In other words, please listen to her when she talks. I totally understand why she's unhappy with you. If you have no clue how to deliver a proper apology that will restore harmony, (and I believe that might be a huge possibility) feel free to contact me again. There are very distinct steps in making a sincere apology. I will be happy to teach you. Good Luck.

Depression

By NANCY STOOPS

Do you seem to be always sleeping or not able to sleep at all? Are you eating everything in sight or suffer from no appetite at all. Have you lost pleasure in doing the things that once made you so happy? Are you unable to focus and concentrate? If you are able to answer yes to the questions above, you may be suffering from some form of depression.

Depression comes in many forms. Dysthymic Disorder is a very mild form of depression. People suffering from this are very functional but just don't feel happy. People suffering from severe depression aren't very functional and need to be treated. Severe depression can lead to suicide and must be taken seriously. Bipolar Disorder involves a cycle of a very manic mood and then a fall into a very severe depression. Many times the mania is accompanied by severe spending or some other risk taking behavior. People suffering from Bipolar Disorder need to be on medication. There are subtypes within these main categories that I won't be expanding upon.

Depression comes from a lack of serotonin, a chemical produced in the brain. Many people chose to take a pill that will put the serotonin you are lacking back into your body. Exercise is also a great way to increase your body's serotonin and to do it in a natural way. Many of my clients are asked to keep a daily feelings journal as a way to help combat their depression as well.

Don't let your depression or the depression of a loved one become a way of life. Everybody should be able to feel the joy and depression stops us from doing that. Take the time to journal, exercise and possible get some professional help you need to feel the joy in your life.

The Worms Are Back

By PASTOR MARK HOPPER

This has been a long, hot summer. Recently, we have enjoyed cooler weather in Southern California, but the hot summer weather took a toll on my vegetable garden. The tomato plants produced very few tomatoes during the hot summer months. But, now the plants look better and there are more blossoms again. I hope we are in for a second harvest in the weeks ahead. But, there is a new adversary in the garden. Along with new green leaves and tiny new blossoms are some big, ugly green worms.

These green tomato worms have a large horn on their head. They blend in with the green leaves and are very hard to see.

I am not sure where they come from or how they get into my garden, but I suspect that some butterfly's may be responsible.

Two ways I can tell that the worms are back are the black droppings that they leave behind and the twigs that they have consumed.

These ugly, green worms can devastate a healthy plant very quickly. They must eat night and day.

I don't like to use bug spray in my garden. My best way to get rid of the worms is to pull off the branch they are eating and toss it and the worm in the trash.

I have been vigilant, keeping an eye out for these determined adversaries. It is man against nature. It seems like nature and the worms are winning.

If you have had any success against these green tomato worms, please let me know. If you have a homemade or secret remedy, I would like to hear from you.

Raising healthy tomatoes is more difficult than you think. The little seeds that I planted last spring have grown into big, healthy plants. They have survived the heat of summer and seem to be ready to produce a new crop. But, the worms are back - they seemed determined to prevail.

the San Bernardino Regional Emergency Training Center (SBRETC) in San Bernardino. The SBRETC provides comprehensive emergency training for Aircraft Crash Rescue Firefighters worldwide.

"Hitting an active gas line while digging, planting or doing demolition work can cause serious injury, property damage, outages and costly repairs," said Sergio Jimenez, SoCalGas spokesperson.

The event was hosted by the San Bernardino County Fire Department the California Regional Common Ground Alliance (CARCGA).

The CACGA is an association of utility operators, professional excavators and other stakeholders, dedicated to ensuring public safety, environmental protection, and integrity of underground services since 2004, according to the organization's website.

Utility line facts:

- SoCalGas reminds the public to dig safely by dialing 811 two working days prior to shoveling to know the location of underground utility lines so that you'll avoid hitting them.

- Every six minutes an underground utility line somewhere in the country is damaged because someone did not call 811, the national "Call Before You Dig" phone number.
- You could find utility lines, anywhere, including under streets, sidewalks and private property – sometimes you'll see them just inches below the surface.
- More than 100 billion feet of utility lines lay buried underground in communities throughout the United States and those lines bring us our Internet, cable TV, natural gas, electricity and water.
- Hitting one of these pipelines while digging, planting or doing demolition work can cause serious injury, property damage, outages and costly repairs.
- That's why it's important to know the location of underground utility lines before you dig, regardless if you're planning a big construction project or just landscaping your yard.
- After you call 811, Underground Service Alert will contact SoCalGas and other utilities so that representatives from these utilities can visit the proposed dig site to mark the locations of buried utility lines at no charge. ■ other surrounding areas.

On September 13, 2016, the first suspect was stopped during a routine traffic stop by Deputy B. Ortiz of the Loma Linda Police Department. Daniel Bustos, the driver, was searched and in possession of pry tools as well as a vast amount of stolen checks, mail and ID cards. Deputies believed Bustos used the pry tools to break into residents' mail boxes in Loma Linda. Bustos was then arrested and booked, facing felony of identity theft and check fraud.

Deputy Ortiz continued to investigate and issued a search warrant for 2301 N. Sepulveda Ave. #22 which was believed to be the location of where more stolen mail and other illegal items were being stored. The search warrant was officially served on September 27, 2016 where Deputies discovered even more stolen mail, checks and ID information. Deputies were also able to successfully arrest three more suspects, Tina Nolan, Linda Crume and Juan Herrera, and charge them with ID theft, check and credit card fraud.

The remaining suspects, Eduardo Guzman and Nicholas Costello, had already fled the area before police had arrived but were later found and arrested.

Evidence suggests that dozens of victims had their were affected in the following areas: Loma Linda, Cooley Ranch Area of San Bernardino, Rancho Cucamonga, North Fontana, and Adelanto. Of the dozens affected, over 25 have been notified with the rest to be contacted shortly.

University Professor Gives Chino High Students Advice On Applying To College

By CVUSD

Chino High students with questions about the college application process recently received advice from Dr. Begona Echeverria, a University of California, Riverside professor.

Dr. Echeverria met in the school library on Oct. 3 with about 75 students from Diana Murillo's Advanced Placement math classes. Dr. Echeverria gave advice on college essays and offered to give free feedback to students who emailed their essay drafts to her. "She provided valuable insights into the admissions process and how (student) essays can make a difference in getting into our top colleges and universities," Murillo said.

Dr. Echeverria also talked about misconceptions some students have about top colleges, and reminded students not to rule those schools out when applying for higher education. "She attended Stanford University and spoke highly of the experience she had," Murillo said. "She was not thinking of applying there until one of her teachers encouraged her. It changed her life."

Dr. Echeverria volunteers every year to talk to Murillo's students, the Chino High math teacher said. ■

'Journey To The West' Coming To Diamond Bar High Stage

By WVUSD

Diamond Bar - The Diamond Bar High School Theatre Company begins its fall season with a performance of Mary Zimmerman's Journey to the West. Tickets are $10 for students and $15 for adults. The show times are November 3-5, at 7 p.m. and November 6 at 4 p.m. in the Diamond Bar High School theater. Tickets may be purchased online at seatyourself.biz/dbhsdrama.

Journey to the West is taken from one of the four great Chinese classical novels from the sixteenth century and adapted from the translation by Anthony C. Yu. The play mixes whimsy with spiritual weight, and combines comedy, adventure, and satire to tell the rambling story of an unlikely foursome – an insatiable pig, a ferocious river monster, and a very energetic naughty monkey king, who become both disciples and protectors of Tripitaka, a monk, on his quest to Central Asia and India to obtain sacred texts.

"Part vaudeville, part mystical dreamscape and Eastern-inflected ballet, Zimmerman's meticulously choreographed production is a fabulous balancing act that stunningly juxtaposes the rambunctious energy and low comedy of a Wizard of Oz-like trip with the lyrical beauty of Chinese poetry and the mysterious revelations of a religious search." --Chicago Sun Times
