Chino Valley Officials' Texts and Emails Must Be Disclosed on All Public Matters

By MARISSA MITCHELL

Chino Valley, CA – In early March, the California Supreme Court ruled in a unanimous decision to disclose all public-related information regardless of source, a cause supported by open-government advocates. Cities in and around Chino Valley are looking to comply with said ruling, which generally forces public employees, including politicians, to share texts and emails to public record, even when they come from personal devices.

This ruling came from a long-standing 8-year battle after the city of San Jose refused to release "private" texts and emails to a public records request. These texts and emails, sent by officials, discussed a downtown development project. According to the new ruling, the court stated that communication sent on personal cell phones and computers must be disclosed to the public

The City of Chino will hold a special election on July 11 to vote on Measure H. If the measure is passed, 20 acres of rural land in North Chino will be rezoned, allowing home developer D.R. Horton to build 180 new homes.

By MARISSA MITCHELL

Chino, CA - There is a grassroots group – "Protect Chino No on H" – campaigning against a large housing development that will be built if passed on special ballot July 11. Developer D.R. Horton plans to build 180 homes in north Chino if the special election ballot passes.

There is vehement opposition to this ballot in and around the surrounding neighborhoods. If approved, the measure stipulates that 20 acres of rural land south of Francis Avenue would be rezoned. In place of rural space will be 12 single-family homes, 87 detached single-family homes, and 73 condos.

A community meeting will be held on May 20 at 4 p.m. at Wolfenbarger Landscape Store, 5675 Francis Avenue, in Chino, for those opposing Measure H.

In response to this group, property owners of the rural land have organized a committee called "Support Chino Jobs and Schools, Yes, on Measure H."

Currently, 30 acres of parceled land north of Cinemark Movies in Chino is zoned for one house per acre, possess-

A Real Estate Minute

BY GIL RIVERA

This is my first in a series of short articles giving you updates about the local real estate market.

We are all busy with our jobs, family and friends so I will make these articles short enough to read in "A Real Estate Minute"!

As for my background, I've been a State Certified Real Estate Appraiser for 25 years and have owned my real estate sales company, SellYourCasa.com, for the past 17 years. I appraise over 250 homes a year for refinances, sales, listings, trusts, bankruptcies, divorces, and estates. I've lived in Diamond Bar for the past 26 years. I appraise homes from Los Angeles thru the San Gabriel Valley to the Inland Empire and down thru North Orange County.

As I write this, May 2017 has come upon us and the 2nd financial quarter is almost complete. It is still a SELLER'S market! In the past few weeks, homes have been selling within 7-14 days! Ever since the interest rates went up at the end of March, the market has been booming. Why? Many Buyers who were sitting on the fence decided to take action before the rates rise again. Many buyers equals More offers which in turn yields Higher prices for Sellers!

Check in next time for more updates! ■

May 23, 1934: Police Kill Outlaws Bonnie & Clyde

BY HISTORY.COM

On this day in 1934, notorious criminals Bonnie Parker and Clyde Barrow are shot to death by Texas and Louisiana state police while driving a stolen car near Sailes, Louisiana.

Bonnie Parker met the charismatic Clyde Barrow in Texas when she was 19 years old and her husband (she married when she was 16) was serving time in jail for murder. Shortly after they met, Barrow was imprisoned for robbery. Parker visited him every day, and smuggled a gun into prison to help him escape, but he was soon caught in Ohio and sent back to jail. When Barrow was paroled in 1932, he immediately hooked up with Parker, and the couple began a life of crime together.

After they stole a car and committed several robberies, Parker was caught by police and sent to jail for two months. Released in mid-1932, she rejoined Barrow. Over the next two years, the couple teamed with various accomplices to rob a string of banks and stores across five states—Texas, Oklahoma, Missouri, New Mexico and Louisiana. To law enforcement agents, the Barrow Gang—including Barrow's childhood friend, Raymond Hamilton, W.D. Jones, Henry Methvin, Barrow's brother Buck and his wife Blanche, among others—were cold-blooded criminals who didn't hesitate to kill anyone who got in their way, especially police or sheriff's deputies. Among the public, however, Parker and Barrow's reputation as dangerous outlaws was mixed with a romantic view of the couple as "Robin Hood"-like folk heroes.

Their fame was increased by the fact that Bonnie was a woman—an unlikely criminal—and by the fact that the couple posed for playful photographs together, which were later found by police and released to the media. Police almost captured the famous duo twice in the spring of 1933, with surprise raids on their hideouts in Joplin and Platte City, Missouri. Buck Barrow was killed in the second raid, and Blanche was arrested, but Bonnie and Clyde escaped once again. In January 1934, they attacked the Eastham Prison Farm in Texas to help Hamilton break out of jail, shooting several guards with machine guns and killing one.

Texan prison officials hired a retired Texas police officer, Captain Frank Hamer, as a special investigator to track down Parker and Barrow. After a three-month search, Hamer traced the couple to Louisiana, where Henry Methvin's family lived. Before dawn on May 23, Hamer and a group of Louisiana and Texas lawmen hid in the bushes along a country road outside Sailes. When Parker and Barrow appeared, the officers opened fire, killing the couple instantly in a hail of bullets.

All told, the Barrow Gang was believed responsible for the deaths of 13 people, including nine police officers. Parker and Barrow are still seen by many as romantic figures, however, especially after the success of the 1967 film Bonnie and Clyde, starring Faye Dunaway and Warren Beatty. ■

Our Life:

Is Anything Really Forever?

By MICHAEL ARMIJO

The hardest day of my life was a year ago in May. It was like every other morning with the exception that it was their anniversary. Mom and dad got up, went to brunch, went home, and then got into a little argument. My dad wanted somewhere to go to be by himself so he went to check on his rental property that was recently vacant.

I got home that night around 9 p.m. and found out my mother had called. Mom was wondering why dad wasn't home yet, but it was like him to stay at his rental property and fix things. Mom wasn't too worried, so I went to bed. A few hours later she called me again; "Your father still isn't home yet, now I'm worried." At a frantic pace, I went to his rental property and found his truck in the front of a darkened house. With a racing heart and fear to go in and find him, lying there, I called 911 for assistance.

LIFE MAKES A LEFT

I told the operator that I was afraid to enter the house by myself, I was afraid of what I might find. A sheriff deputy arrived and shined his flashlight on the front door. It was so dark at 2 am, I didn't even notice the front door wide open. We walked inside and there was my daddy, lying in the hallway, lying on his side without movement.

I remember yelling; "He isn't moving, why isn't he moving?" The officer grabbed me and dragged me outside, calmed me down, and told me to wait while he checked what on was going on.

At that point I tried to convince myself he was asleep on the floor or just passed out. I was in complete denial that he would be gone – and gone forever – until the paramedics came. They ran into the house in the hopes of helping a victim survive, but three minutes later they walked out. I wasn't sure what to do, but I knew one thing, I had to try to be responsible, I had to go home and tell my mom.

YOU NEVER KNOW WHAT TO EXPECT

When I told my brother and sisters the news of our father, I received a different reaction from each. But the strongest reaction embedded in my memory is the one from my mom. I called my sisters to help me tell mom about dad, but they lived so far away they couldn't be there for quite some time. I knew I couldn't let my mom wait that long, she was waiting for me to bring my father home. I knocked on my neighbor's door but they couldn't hear me from their back bedroom. It was at that time I realized that no one was around and I was going to have to do this on my own, so be it.

It wasn't the screaming or the crying that affected me so much; it was what my mother said. She was angry because she and my father had promised each other they'd leave this earth together. They made a pact. They had a deal. She was angry because he broke that pact. The deal was off. At that point I admired how strong their love was; I admired how much they really loved each other. So much so, they not only discussed how they'd be together, but how they'd leave together as well. I never knew this, and it saddens me that I had to find out about it this way. I guess sometimes regardless of what this life gives you, and regardless of how much you think you know, you find out that you never know what to expect.

A FIRST FOR EVERYTHING

Whoever said, "the hardest time after a death is the first year" was right. It's been interesting and difficult. Death really does something to people; it really makes them change. You hear things you never thought you'd hear; you see things you never thought you'd see. That first Thanksgiving, that first Christmas. The first time one of your parents isn't at your son's sixth grade graduation or your daughter's recital. Your kid's birthday parties, your son's little league games. You sit there enjoying yourself and then sense that something missing. The first time I felt stressed and dad wasn't there to tell me; "it'll all work out ok," was my hardest. Dad wasn't kidding when he told me; "there's a first for everything."

YOU NEVER KNOW

If there was one thing I've really had to push into my life is to enjoy it. If one of my children gets out of line or has done something wrong, I talk about it. I don't scream and yell, and I don't smack them. I never send them to bed on a bad note, and whenever I leave, I always give them a hug and a kiss (something my 12-year-old son tries to avoid, but I force it on him). I do this because my father and I had the worst relationship in the world. And then one day, for a reason only God may know, I confronted him with my feelings. We really opened up, laid it all on the table, and enjoyed ourselves. It took time for us to heal, but we worked on it, and in the end I had the fortunate opportunity to have a close and loving relationship with my dad. It was the fastest five years of my life.

We had fun, forgave each other, and told each other we loved each other. I am very fortunate to able to say that I don't have any regrets about our friendship. I always wanted more from life but he always told me to "stop striving for bigger toys and invest yourself in love, because you never know, son, you just never know."

SOME THINGS ARE FOREVER

There's something about seeing your parents in enormous grief that does something to a person. They're your safety net in life, they're the one thing you can bet your life on who'll always take you back if you failed out there in the world. They're the ones that you knew would love you forever, regardless of what you've done or where you've been. When that gets destroyed or damaged, you come to the realization that you're definitely, and I mean definitely, on your own. Life becomes this big "do or die" situation. Ready or not it's time to grow up. You get kind of nervous that the encouraging source in your life is gone. The wisdom they provided turns into a distant whisper.

It's kind of like when you were in school; you'd walk into the class and find you were having a pop quiz. You felt this panic overwhelm you, and you'd try your hardest to remember what the teacher told you the day before. You had no warning, no time to prepare, the test is here and it's now. You never anticipated this coming; it never even entered your mind. All you can do now is hope you were paying attention all that time, all you could do was hope you were a good student. Teacher's not going to give you any answers today; you are on your own.

A day will then come, when life tests you and your ability. After you feel confident you've passed that test you realize an important reality: just like the love you never knew that your parents shared, some things really are forever.

Why Sell Now?

By NEF CORTEZ

How can it be a good time to buy and at the same time a good time to sell?

Real Estate is local!

Although Macroeconomic factors are the overall influence on the real estate market, individual property values are most influenced by local market conditions. We have all heard the mantra "Location, Location, Location!" in describing the desirability of homes. The right area...the right school district...and for some people, even the right orientation.

So when is it a good time to sell?

Now would be a good time to sell and "move up", If you are going to outgrow your current residence within 2-5 years, thereby locking in an interest rate that is still close to historical lows at just under 4 %.

If you are going to downsize due to retirement, or have become an empty nester, it is a good time to sell and lock in the dramatic gains achieved by the huge increase in property values over the last 5 years. Even if you go out and rent for a while, because you are not able to determine exactly where you want to settle in...it might be better to rent in a couple of different locations, sort of "scouting" those areas out to make sure you like them before making the permanent investment.

Mother kills two-year-old

25 years to life in state prison. Hesperian mother Jaimi Roberts, 24, was sentenced for the crime she had been found guilty of on March 22 of this year: involuntary manslaughter and assault on a child causing death. Her son, Grant Dunn Jr., died of complications due to the injuries she inflicted upon him. Superior Court Judge Eric M. Nakata in Victorville imposed the term.

During the trial, jurors witnessed Roberts' video-recorded statement, in which she admitted she "dropped elbows" on her son's abdomen. After autopsy, it was found these stomach blows had ruptured his intestines and brought about his death two days later. She also re-enacted striking the child with her elbow in the video.

Judge Nakata stated, "For you to sit here and tell me this was an accident is outrageous." Roberts had claimed both in court and during interview that she was "play-wrestling" with her son, and that his death was an "accident." She claimed no prior child abuse and insisted that they "play-wrestled" on April 22, 2014.

The prosecutor Deputy District Attorney David Foy indicated to the court that Roberts did not procure medical care for the 2-year-old for two days after the injury, even though the toddler was vomiting, could not stand, and felt cold sensations in his legs.

Quoting a probation report, Judge Nakata said: "The crime involved great bodily harm and/or other acts disclosing a high degree of cruelty, viciousness and callousness in that the victim suffered for an extended period of time after the defendant struck him, and made a conscious decision to avoid medical attention for him until after he lost consciousness."

Paramedics had gone into the Hesperia home of Roberts (then age 21) in the afternoon after the child had lost consciousness. The child was then hospitalized, but died later that afternoon from sepsis in the bloodstream – what occurs once internal organs have been ruptured.

Roberts will serve her sentence in state prison. ■

Gabrielino HS Earns State Exemplary Program Award for Art Education

San Gabriel, CA- Gabrielino High School has received a 2017 Exemplary Program Award for its outstanding visual and performing arts program, a distinction reserved for 23 of the 275 California Gold Ribbon schools honored in April.

The recognition shines a light on Gabrielino's 24 visual and performing arts courses – including speech and debate, visual arts and theater – and their ability to evoke creativity, collaboration, critical thinking and communication.

"We are proud to provide an engaging variety of educational opportunities and incentives to our students, like art gallery visits, meet and greets with professional artists, and classes for uncommon interests like stop motion animation," said Kat Ross, Gabrielino's visual and performing arts department chairwoman. "Our dedication to a unique and well-rounded arts education is part of what sets Gabrielino apart."

Only schools that have been awarded the Gold Ribbon distinction can be considered for the Exemplary Program Award, which Gabrielino received this year for increasing English learner graduation rates and improving college eligibility for Hispanic students.

The award measures a program's excellence through several benchmarks, such as whether students can gain industry or academic certifications, whether the program provides adequate equipment and facilities and whether it proves accountability through internal and external program reviews.

"I'm thrilled for Gabrielino to receive such a distinguished award because the work of art educators often goes unseen," Gabrielino Principal Sharron Heinrich said. "This state recognition validates the hard work of our visual and performing arts teachers."

In addition to arts education, Exemplary Program Awards were also granted for schools with outstanding career and technical education and physical activity and nutrition education.

"San Gabriel Unified is dedicated to providing the best academic and artistic programs for promoting student growth, and this award acknowledges our ongoing efforts," SGUSD Superintendent Dr. John Pappalardo said. "Congratulations to Gabrielino High School for the visual and performing arts program's phenomenal success." ■

News Tips to Ease Recovery from Addiction

BY STATEPOINT

Those recovering from an addiction know what a major challenge the process can be on the body and mind, as well as on the wellness of friends and family supporting your endeavor.

While a physician should be consulted in working out a recovery plan, there are steps one can personally take to smooth the road ahead.

Thinking Positively

Recovery is an ongoing process, and won't be resolved overnight. Knowing this can help you stay motivated when the going gets tough. Acknowledging but also forgiving yourself for past mistakes is a good place to start.

Including family and friends who have been affected by your addiction in this healing process is important.

Feeling Your Best

Addiction puts major stress on the mind and body. Good nutrition and proper sleep can restore your body's systems and processes.

Seek out a diet that contains probiotics, which replenish the digestive system with beneficial bacteria that may have been depleted as a result of toxins and chemical overload, poor diet, bodily stress and overall poor digestive health. B-vitamins are needed to energize metabolism and proper cell and muscle function, and fish oil with omega-3 fatty acids is proven to support cognitive function and brain health, joint health, heart health, eye health and more.

However, keep in mind that it can be difficult to satisfy all of one's nutritional needs under normal circumstances, and can be even more challenging when your body is recovering from addiction. In addition to a healthy diet, consider seeking out supplements designed specifically for people in recovery, such as Recovery24, which was developed by addiction recovery experts and a board-certified nutritionist.

Recovery24 is designed to replenish your body's nutrients and support sleep, energy, healthy digestion, and overall well-being around the clock. The special formulation contains key nutrients such as probiotics, B-vitamins, fish oil, chamomile, jujube fruit, lemon balm leaf, phosphatidyl serine and antioxidants. The A.M. packs are taken with the first meal of the day and support sustained energy and mental focus. The P.M. Packs are taken 30 minutes before you go to sleep and support a calm, restful sleep.

The road to recovery is challenging and loved ones may also experience their own stresses, sleeplessness and nutritional gaps. Recovery24 supplements are safe and effective even for those not in recovery. More information can be found at TryRecovery24.com.

Get Active

Your road to recovery should involve new hobbies and interests. Start with some fun, physical activity to get your body moving, get healthier and boost endorphins. Whether it's training for a 5k or joining a pick-up game of basketball in the park, exercise is a crucial component to your overall wellness.

Get Involved

Consider joining other local organizations -- from being an involved member of a religious congregation to participating in a local volunteer group to taking art or music classes at a community center. It's important to stay focused on positive, healthy activities and goals, and make friends and connections with people who are doing likewise.

Experts know that addiction recovery requires a multifaceted approach that addresses the mind, the soul and the body. While recovering from addiction, take the best care of yourself possible to support your goal. ■

Sriracha Turkey Burgers

with Sweet Potato Chips and Ginger-Dressed Greens

BY HELLO FRESH

Cooking Time: 35 mins

Servings: 4

Nutrition: 800 Calories

Ingredients:

- Sweet Potato- 2
- Shallot- 2
- Garlic- 2 cloves
- Ginger- 1 thumb
- Cilantro- 1/4 oz.
- Mayonnaise- 4 tbsp
- Sriracha- 4 tsp
- Ground Turkey- 20 oz.
- Soy Sauce- 4 tsp
- Potato Buns- 4
- Spring Mix Lettuce- 4 oz.

1. BAKE SWEET POTATOES.

Wash and dry all produce. Preheat oven to 450 degrees. Slice sweet potato into very thin rounds, like chips. Toss on a baking sheet with a drizzle of oil. Season with salt and pepper. Bake in oven until browned and crisp, about 25 minutes, flipping halfway through.

2. PREP AND MAKE MAYO. Halve, peel, and mince shallot. Mince or grate garlic. Peel ginger, then mince or grate until you have 1 TBSP. Finely chop cilantro. In a small bowl, combine mayonnaise and up to 1½ tsp sriracha (use less to taste). Season with salt and pepper.

3. SHAPE BURGERS. In a large bowl, combine ground turkey, shallot, half the garlic, 2 tsp ginger, half the cilantro, ½ tsp sriracha (to taste), and 2 tsp soy sauce (we sent more). Season with salt and pepper. Form mixture into two patties. Season all over with salt and pepper.

4. COOK BURGERS Heat a drizzle of oil in a large pan over medium-high heat (use an ovenproof pan if you have one). Add burgers and cook until browned, 2-3 minutes per side. Transfer pan to oven and bake burgers until no longer pink in center, 5-7 minutes. TIP: If your pan isn't ovenproof, place burgers on baking sheet with sweet potatoes.

5. TOAST BUNS AND MAKE SALAD. Split buns down center, then place on baking sheet with sweet potatoes to toast, 2-3 minutes. In another large bowl, whisk together a pinch of ginger, a pinch of garlic, and a drizzle of oil. Season with salt, pepper, and more garlic and ginger (as desired). Add spring mix and toss to coat.

6. FINISH AND SERVE. Spread a little sriracha mayo on each bun, then top with a burger and remaining cilantro. Serve with salad, sweet potato, and any remaining sriracha mayo for dipping on the side. TIP: Add a little salad to your burger, if desired. ■

A Cow Bell

BY MARK HOPPER

Many years ago my wife and I and a group of adults from our church traveled to Romania. We worked in partnership with a young pastor and growing church in the middle of the country. In addition to visiting their church in the city of Cluj, we spent a week together in a rural village near the Transylvania mountains. A number of young couples participated in a week-long marriage retreat. In addition to daily discussions on marriage, there was also time for recreation and relaxation. The Romanians were just as competitive as Americans. Coed volleyball games were enjoyed by all of us.

One day during the week, I saw a line of cows walking down a dirt road near the field where we were playing volleyball. The lead cow had a small brass bell hanging from a strap around his neck. He was leading the other cows back into the village at the end of the day from the grassy fields nearby. I told the members of our team that we were going to continue to play volleyball until the "cows come home". They didn't know how accurate my prediction was. We ended the game a few minutes later after the cows passed by us on the dirt road.

Recently while I was playing with our granddaughter at our house, she had discovered a small cow bell on a shelf in our bedroom. She was intrigued by its size and sound. She didn't know that this small bell was a gift from our friends in Romania. I had not noticed that bell for years, but it immediately brought back fond memories of our trip to Romania and the wonderful friends we met there many years ago.

You probably have some keepsakes and souvenirs that remind you of people and events in your life. You may have a picture or a plaque that brings back special memories of places you have been.

In one example in the Bible, the people of Israel piled up twelve large boulders along the bank of the Jordan River.

These large stones were to serve as a reminder that the Israelites crossed the Jordan River on dry ground (Joshua chapter 4). These large stones were to remind future generations of this remarkable event in their nation's history.

I think we all need visual, tangible objects to help us remember special events and special people in our lives. You probably have some things around your house - pictures, trophies, and souvenirs. Let me encourage you to take some time this week to look around your house or office and reflect on the memories you find there.

Take time to tell your children and grandchildren the meaning and significance of some of the things that are hanging on your walls or sitting on the shelves in your house. Maybe it is time to add a few new ones while you have the time. You will be glad you did and they will too!

Happiness Is Free For Everybody

BY NANCY STOOPS M.A., M.F.T

They don't sell happiness at the mall or online. Happiness is free and available to all that want it. Happiness is in those indescribable amazing moments. Those moments that give you goose bumps and really let you know you are alive. I call them as-good-as-it-gets moments. I know the world feels hard but that doesn't mean we can't embrace the good and all the wonderful we have in our lives. I think the secret to happiness is in feeling grateful every day for all that we are blessed with and not taking all the little miracles about life for granted. The honor of being alive each day is truly a little miracle and an opportunity to be happy.

Take this moment out and take a moment to be grateful, to smile and to feel how you deserve to feel every moment of every day. Now think about what you allow to steal your happiness and make a promise to yourself that you no longer will allow that anymore. We all have hard pieces in our stories regarding our lives. It's in our reaction that we have the power. Even though we have disappointments, loss, trauma and bad experiences we still have the power to decide we really want to be happy. In fact in deciding we are going to be happy no matter what we are incorporating a fabulous coping skill into our tool boxes. Learning to love yourself helps with feeling you are deserving of happiness every day. Let go of the guilt and forgive yourself for whatever you have done. Self-pity is also the root to unhappiness. The past needs to be something that we all just learn from. The present is truly a gift and an opportunity to be happy each and every day. Make today the day you forgive yourself and set yourself free by choosing happiness!!!

Straight Talk With Danice

BY DANICE AKIYOSHI, N.D.

Dear Danice Akiyoshi, My father has a terminal illness that he is in denial about. He has asked me to take him house hunting close to the beach so he can have a better yard to enjoy the sun. He is frail and weak and I'm not sure that he can survive the move or get used to a new neighborhood. He sleeps a lot so I'm not sure when he's planning on enjoying this new yard that he talks about. He would also be moving away from his health providers which he says he hates. None of this is logical to me, but I want him to be happy. Please help.

-Bob

Hi Bob, Sometimes when people are faced with a difficult diagnosis they try to become involved in things that give them the impression that they are still involved in the process of life and true living. Do you think you could provide these feelings for your dad if you spent some days at the beach or in the mountains or even in the desert? We have so many wonderful locations in our area that help people feel like they're on a true get away. The week end cruises might be a good idea too. Remind him that moving has far too many nasty tasks involved and that having fun and enjoying the nice weather is a possibility without the hardships of moving. I hope you find a way to enjoy this time together.

if they “relate in some substantive way to the conduct of the public’s business.”

In response, the city of Chino Hills has set up email accounts for all public commissions, and is provided a training workshop on Monday May 22 at 7 p.m. in council chambers. Assistant City Attorney Elizabeth Calciano will commence with the training that day.

Now, public officials will be subject to scrutiny on multiple levels. The thought is that they will be disinclined to conduct public business on personal devices or avoid scrutiny.

California Supreme Court Judge Carol A. Corrigan wrote of this recent ruling, “A city employee’s communications related to the conduct of public business do not cease to be public records just because they were sent or received using a personal account.

In the city of Chino, email accounts will be issued to the planning commission, but not to the community services commission because it is not a “decision-making authority,” according to spokeswoman Monica Gutierrez. Even prior to the San Jose court ruling, the city of Chino established a policy encouraging the use of city-issued cell phones and other such devices.

The Chino policy stipulates that all communication on city-issued equipment is subject to perusal at any time, and open to monitoring and public record requests.

The Chino Valley Unified School District spokeswoman Brenda Dunkle stated the district is awaiting recommendations in the middle of May from the CSBA (California School Boards Association) regarding this ruling. She also stated that the district’s current technology use policy declares that any device accessing the district’s network is not private, whether used on site or off.

Fire Chief Tim Shackelford stated he has iterated to his personnel only to use fire district servers and accounts to correspond, create, or store documents and communications related to district business. Training will also be provided for fire station employees.

Various news media representatives have called the decision “a resounding victory for the public.” This new ruling sends a strong message that public officials and employees cannot evade public scrutiny by using personal accounts.

Local governments have expressed concerns about invasion of privacy for its workers, so further concrete details are to come from the California Supreme Court on just how to go about this monitoring. Executive director of the First Amendment Coalition David Synder stated, “If employees are conducting written business about the people’s business on email, that ought to be available to the public. It shouldn’t matter if the email is privately owned or owned by the government.” ■

"Protect Chino" launches Prop H campaign

ing the grazing land and 8 single-family houses. In a Chino City Council meeting in April, the council voted 4-1 to place Measure H on the ballot for citywide election.

Chairman of “No on H” Ed Layaye stated, “The neighborhood is very concerned about this project, “We’re meeting weekly and figuring out how to compete with a multi-billion dollar corporation like D.R. Horton.”

Former mayor Larry Walker is the group treasurer and wrote the argument opposing Measure H, stating, “I’ve become aware of a dramatic number of developments cooking in Chino and it seems like every one is a violation of the general plan,” he said. “I told the people 40 years ago the general plan should be the guide for the development of Chino.”

The property owners of the rural land are long-time Chino residents, and state that this development is a benefit for the city. Matt Evans and father-in-law Ron Brewer, stated that more than 600 Chino residents have expressed support for the project.

Evans declared, “Ron Brewer and I believe that Measure H will be a positive step forward for our entire community. It will enable young Chino residents the opportunity to raise their families here and offers new home ownership in an affordable part of the city.”

Other owners echo this sentiment, saying that this development will lure more potential residents to Chino, thus bringing in more economical revenue to be used municipally.

Special ballot is to occur on July 11 of this year. ■

Chaparral students make global connections

Gyekrum Arusha Secondary School, located over 8,500 miles away in East Africa.

Education specialist Kimberly Ramos formed the partnership with teacher Zaituni Njovu and her students through the World Education Connection program.

The students and teachers got to know each other by communicating back and forth using email and Google Hangout.

"They would ask lots of questions and post photos," Ramos said about the 21st century-learning technology.

"Anything I received from the teacher, I would post on Google Classroom to share with my kids."

Ramos said her students embraced the program and were amazed with how many similarities they had with their new friends.

"The kids loved seeing each other. And the things we learned this year have had more meaning because we were able to connect with the other half of the 'Kilimanjaro Squad' on a personal level."

The relationship deepened when students recently held a campus clean-up project to provide supplies to the school in Karatu Urusha.

On May 10, global teams shared their thoughts of the power of connection during an inaugural World Education Day event.

Classmates Julia Brandt, Alex Ginez, and Reedy arrived before the 7:45 a.m. opening bell, eager to participate in the live global broadcast.

"Asante Sana!" the students exclaimed in Swahili while waving to one another.

"We got to experience the way they live and learn," Brant said. "I wouldn't have changed a thing about this experience!"

"I hope we can stay connected with the kids in Tanzania."

"The best thing has been the sharing," Ginez offered.

"We talked about our siblings, our pets, and hobbies. We have a lot in common."

Students said they also gained appreciation for their own lives after seeing the East African partner school squeeze 80 students inside a class with dirt floors and dilapidated furniture.

"It showed me to be grateful for what I have, and to respect elders and family," Reedy said. ■
